Do you love playing repetitive games, but you just wish they could be even more depressing?

No?

That makes sense, it's a very stupid thing to wish for. And futile.fun is a very stupid thing.

From the makers of damn.dog and pretend.world, futile.fun is a game that puts you in the role of Sisyphus, the Greek king condemned by the gods to an eternity of performing an unplesant and pointless task. Reminds you a lot of your job, doesn't it? Except this game has achievements!

Open futile.fun in the browser of your choice, and then try to ignore the fact that each second you play is just another in a long series of distractions from your own impending death, which is closer now than it was when you started reading this.

And if that bums you out, there's still more fun games for you to play at
